Practice Areas

Wei Song focuses his practice on risk management and corporation compliance for innovative businesses and products, construction of cybercrime, economic and financial crimes prevention systems, criminal defense and accusation, as well as Anti-unfair competition litigation. Wei Song has nearly 20 years' legal practice experience in economic and financial crimes prosecution. He has participated in Chinese legislation on economic and securities crimes, cyber security and data protection. His legislative suggestions have been adopted by National People's Congress (NPC), the Supreme People's Court and Cyberspace Administration of China (CAC). During his tenure as legal counsel in Ant Financial Company, he established criminal compliance and prevention program for Ant Financial Company which covered all business product lines and the collection and use of data. This compliance and prevention program also helped the company to avoid criminal legal risks. In recent years, Wei Song has been invited many times to lecture about criminal and criminal procedure law for the judiciary and enforcement agencies. He has taught in more than 10 workshops for the judicial officers organized by the Supreme People's Procuratorate, the inspection team of the China Securities Regulatory Commission and the economic crime investigators from the provincial Public Security Departments. He has been also invited to give lectures at annual conferences and industry forums organized by the China Securities Law Society, China Criminal Law Society, Tsinghua University, Peking University, Renmin University of China and other institutions.
